

HANNAH VINEYARD

TECHNICAL PROJECT MANAGER

Hannah Vineyard is the newest member of (Y)our Team, and she brings a fresh perspective and the needed talent to serve you – our ZIRRUS One customers.

ZIRRUS One looks for innovative, agile and competitive employees – all focused on one mission: To make others successful. (Y)our success is our success!

In the role of Technical Project Manager, Hannah is the epitome of AGILE: doing whatever it takes to make our customers successful. She has the communications skills, patience and persistence to “herd cats” and bring everyone together to solve problems, meet demands, and keep an eye on the ball to support a customer.

Although Hannah grew up in a family of IT pros and had an affinity for that skill, she earned her degree in Chemistry from Missouri University of Science & Technology (Missouri S&T). After graduation, she headed to San Francisco to be a part of a biotech research group where she learned three important aspects about herself:

1. She has a talent for dissecting problems and discovering solutions.
2. She has in-depth knowledge of math and science and was a natural “tech / IT geek.”
3. She felt confined in a laboratory setting and wanted to find a career that gave her more human interaction. Hannah could not leverage her talents to communicate and build loyal relationships in a lab environment.

So, Hannah headed back to Missouri to join ZIRRUS One.

Her work at ZIRRUS One caters to her strengths. She keeps projects on time and on task. She is very detailed focused and has the graceful ability to keep the ZIRRUS One team organized. Her technology / IT understanding gives her an advantage when talking through problems with customers.

Three words that describe Hannah: Resilient. Productive. A leader.

And, just like her ZIRRUS One colleagues – Hannah is dedicated to our customers. We make our customers better. Hannah makes all of us better!
